GeoSpatial Data is the New Oil

"Oil changed the world in the 1900s. It drove cars, it drove the whole chemical industry," Krzanich explains. "Data, I look at it as the new oil. It's going to change most industries across the board."

"Data is the new oil. It's valuable, but if unrefined it cannot really be used. It has to be changed into gas, plastic, or chemicals to create a valuable entity that drives profitable activity; so must data be broken down, analyzed for it to have value." - Clive Humby

Extracting vs Refining

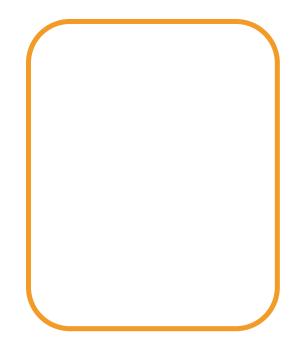

"Data is the new oil. It's valuable, but if unrefined it cannot really be used. It has to be changed into gas, plastic, or chemical to create a valuable entity that drives profitable activity, so must data be broken down, analyzed for it to have value."
